Illinois Attorney General Brundage extended his East Side cleanup plan with injunction suits against "two roadhouses and a disorderly resort in Madison." The charges include operating without a license, selling to minors and having "kept in and about their premises the most lewd and lascivious persons who have publicly and openly sung lewd and indecent songs and danced in a lewd and indecent manner."

Manpower shortage cited in 2nd fire

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

One of two devastating house fires in the 2100 block of Lee Avenue early Wednesday could have been avoided by more manpower on the fire department, firefighters say.

"If we weren't short on men, the second fire would never have happened," a firefighter on the scene said.

"The sad part about it is, it doesn't bother (the administration). But it matters a lot to those families left without a home."

But Fire Chief Jerry Wallace said the firefighter's subjective evaluation of the situation may or may not be correct.

"Whether or not an additional man responding could have made a difference, I just don't know. But I doubt it under the circumstances," Wallace said.

Wallace said the fact that the initial building was fully involved in flames when firefighters first arrived, wind conditions, the close proximity of the two structures and a large tree between the two homes all were contributing factors to the second blaze.

Mayor Von Dee Cruse declined to comment.

Both of the one-story frame buildings were totally lost. A firefighter and an occupant of one of the homes both required hospital treatment as a result of the incidents.

The initial blaze, at 2140-42 Lee Ave., started at about 12:45 a.m. and was caused by a faulty gas-powered electrical generator.

The second fire, next door at 2144-46 Lee Ave., ignited from direct flame impingement and the heat produced by the first.

Twelve off-duty firefighters had to be called out to battle the fires, which lasted until about 5:30 a.m.

The initial fire ignited when a 32-year-old man tried to fire up a gas-powered generator.

Electricity at the building had been cut off by the utility company, and the resident was awaiting his federal income tax refund to regain electric power, emergency personnel on the scene said.

The generator exploded, causing first- and second-degree burns to the man's face and igniting the building. The man was taken to St. Elizabeth Medi-

Granite City ward boundaries redrawn

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

Some Granite City residents will live in new wards and be represented by different aldermen next April.

Alderman Juanita Crawley, for example, who has lived in the 1st Ward for the past 28 years, will live in the 3rd Ward unless she moves.

The City Council adopted a redistricting map by a 10-4 vote Tuesday, after an amendment to the map, which would have kept Crawley's home precinct (4) in Ward 1, failed.

Crawley, who was elected to a four-year aldermanic term in 1991, will become an "at large" alderman when the new map takes effect.

No other aldermen were displaced from their present ward.

"I feel left out in the cold," Crawley said of the redistricting plan.

"I don't understand it and never will, unless there was something (political) behind it. I wanted to stay in Ward 1. We've lived here 28 years and this has always been in Ward 1."

"Other aldermen lost areas and gained areas," Crawley said. "But they weren't put out."

Crawley, however, voted in favor of the new map after her proposed amendment failed.

Two 1st Ward aldermen will be elected in April 1993 — one for a two-year term and one for a four-year term.

The four-year seat currently held by 1st Ward Alderman Casmer Skubish will be

Sewer service will end

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

Granite City residents will no longer enjoy free private sewer cleaning.

Mayor Von Dee Cruse cast the tie-breaking vote in favor of an ordinance Tuesday night eliminating the service, provided by the street department for the past 25 years.

Aldermen Paul Fisk, Andy Timko, Judy Whitaker, Jeff Worthen, Walter Milton, Dan Brown and Dan Partney voted in favor of the ordinance. Casmer Skubish, Craig Tarpo, Jim Miller, Ginny O'Beary, Tom Candler, Juanita Crawley and Sandy Crites voted against it.

Cruse, who said the service is used as a political tool by the street department, has pushed for the legislation since taking office.

He said the service costs the city $100,000 per year, and the manpower required to keep the service would be better used on other projects.

The issue has been debated at every council meeting for the past month.

In a 7-4 vote May 27, the City Council placed the ordinance on first reading. The

Kustra praises Project Cleanup

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

Project Cleanup in Venice has gained a fan in Illinois Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra.

Kustra, who heads the state's task force on drugs, came to the New Salem Missionary Baptist Church in Venice on Wednesday to privately discuss Project Cleanup with the Rev. John Henry Williams, other members of Project Cleanup and school and community leaders.

After the meeting, Kustra said that word of Project Cleanup's success has reached Springfield and that "our hope is that we can take these good results and apply them to other portions of the state."

Kustra said he was "very impressed" with Williams and the others he talked with and said he was particularly impressed with their concern and dedication to the young people of the community.

"I think the reason for (Project Cleanup's) suc-

Street department gets waste program

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

Granite City's free yard waste disposal program fell in the lap of Street Superintendent Clayton "Big" Harrison this week.

Following 45 minutes of debate Tuesday night, the City Council voted 9-4 to make the program the responsibility of the street department.

After the street department finished picking up brush in the 7th Ward Wednesday morning, as Harrison had promised aldermen, the department began removing overflowing leaves, grass clippings, tires, brush and garbage from the city's nine remaining collection points.

But, Harrison said, other street department services will have to be put on hold for a while.

The program was initiated earlier this year to provide residents with a free alternative to hiring a waste hauler to collect grass clippings and leaves.

The program, initiated by Alderman Judy Whitaker, chairman of the City Council's Sanitation Committee, has been very popular with residents.

But abuses by citizens depositing items other than leaves and grass, combined with equipment failure and an administrative warning notice from Madison County that at least one drop-off

911 takes effect tonight

The official start of the 911 emergency telephone system is less than 12 hours away, but rescuers have already put it to good use.

Madison County sheriff's deputies have logged about a dozen emergency calls in the past several months, including one at a Collinsville restaurant, that saved the life of a choking one-year-old boy.

The 911 call, which slipped through to the Sheriff's Department, was immediately transferred to Collinsville authorities.

"Their quick action saved this boy's life," Sheriff Bob Churchich said.

The majority of premature calls have come from motorists near Interstate highways who are accustomed to dialing 911 for help, Capt. Jack Fields said.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony is scheduled today to kick off the long-awaited official start of the emergency system. The system will officially go into effect at 12:01 a.m. Friday.

Officials had planned to flip the switch in December, but discrepancies between telephone locations and addresses in the system's computer put 911 on hold.

On Monday, after months of test calls made by police officers and firefighters from homes throughout the county, the system's error rate stood at .34 percent, below the 1 percent or better required by the Illinois Commerce Commission.

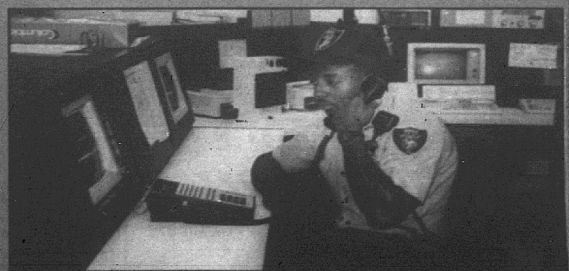

The remaining errors, 911 coordinator Dave Whipple said, can be traced to seldom-used public telephones and some homes in rural areas.

"It's getting down to the end," he said.

Once on line, it will be easier for people to call for help and for rescuers to find their homes, officials said.

The new system, Fields said, could prevent the same confusion that tied up equipment from two volunteer fire departments Saturday.

for election at that time, and another alderman will be elected to complete Crowley's unexpired term.

The redistricting issue was raised last year by former 7th Ward Alderman Emerald Dawes. Citing the one man, one vote principle, Dawes had threatened to sue the city if the council failed to redraw political boundaries.

Dawes said he is satisfied with the council's action.

"It's better for the city, and we'll get better representation from the aldermen," he said.

Some wards currently have more than twice as many residents as others. Under the new plan, the difference in population between the smallest and largest wards is about 325 adults, based on U.S. Census figures.

A list of the wards, and their respective precincts under the new plan, follows.

Ward 1 — Granite City Township precincts 12, 18, 19, 27 and 36.

Ward 2 — precincts 14, 15, 17, 26 and 33.

Ward 3 — precincts 4, 5, 7, 11 and 13.

Ward 4 — precincts 8, 16, 22, 30 and 35.

Ward 5 — precincts 1, 3, 6, 9, 10, 25 and 29.

Ward 6 — precincts 2, 20, 28 and 32.

Ward 7 — precincts 21, 23, 24, 31 and 34.

Aldermen Paul Fisk, Judy Whitaker, Jeff Worthen, Jim Miller, Walter Milton, Andy Timko, Tom Candler, Sandy Crites, Craig Tarpo and Crowley voted in favor of the new

Casmer Skubish, Dan Brown, Dan Partney and Ginny O'Bear voted against the plan.

The proposal was not the most equitable possible in terms of population, one of the considerations mandated by statute.

"We have gotten away from the best program ... and may be facing a lawsuit, in which case a judge will redraw the boundaries," Brown said.

But other aldermen said the plan is much better than the present situation, and meets statutory criteria for compactness and contiguous boundaries.

"Anything is a vast improvement over what we have now," Tarpo said. "I can't see how anybody can say, 'We haven't radically improved present conditions."

force once its availability is pointed out. He promised to personally approach businesses in Southern Illinois with a partnership proposal.

"I'm not sure private industry realizes how many young, qualified workers there are available," Kustra said.

As times get tougher, Kustra said, the state government is going to need help from private sources just to survive.

"More and more state agencies are going to have to look toward forming partnerships with private entities in order to keep providing their services," he said.

"The state needs to start looking at how to become a partner in programs rather than a sole provider."

States," and told Kustra that the problems it faces are too big for Venice to solve alone.

He said, "Venice will face a 'long, hot summer' if the majority of the young people remain unemployed, with nothing to do but run the streets."

Kustra said, "It is a long, hot summer and we need to deal with it with a real effort."

While Kustra said "there is no doubt there is a need for jobs," he quickly added that neither the state nor local communities are financially able to create them.

The only hope, he said, is the creation of partnership programs with private industry.

Kustra said he confident private industry will take advantage of the available young work-

"Those guys who responded die a heck of a job confining damage to those two houses, given the conditions. The situation could have been a hell of a lot worse."

Six men — four firefighters and two ambulance personnel — were the first to arrive at the scene.

One firefighter manned a fire hydrant at 21st Street and Lee Avenue, and another laid a hose from the plug to the house. That left two firefighters to do the rest of the immediate work.

Two more firefighters from the West Granite station arrived shortly thereafter, and attacked the blaze from the alley.

But a hose to reduce heat between 2140-42 and 2144-46 became a low priority until other men could be called to the scene, firefighters said.

The fire department manning table became a matter of contention in contract negotiations between the city and the firefighters union last year. Firefighters maintained that reduced manning would result in greater losses and reduced safety.

"Before this manning table (was adopted), we would have had one or two more guys on the scene immediately," a firefighter said.

"It takes 10 or 15 minutes to call other guys. By then, it's just too late ... This isn't a volunteer fire department."

Firefighter Ron Ashby was overcome by heat and smoke after battling the blaze for about a half-hour. He was taken to SEMC, treated and released.

Two pump trucks, an ambulance, a shift command vehicle and the chief's car responded to the scene.

The Granite City Steel Fire Department provided assistance by refilling air tanks at the scene with its cascade system.

Candler reminded aldermen and Cruse just before the vote Tuesday about the mayor's comment about suffering citizens.

"Remember what the mayor said two weeks ago about punishing residents, and you'll know which way to vote," Candler said.

Private companies in the Granite City area charge about $50 an hour to provide the same service.

Worthen urged the council to consider re-establishing the city service, but for a fee.

An ordinance establishing an $80 fee for cleaning private sanitary sewers was considered in early May, but never voted upon.

Center. No further information was available.

"The fire at 2144-46 Lee ignited from heat from the first blaze."

"When you pull up and have so many things to do at once, there just isn't enough manpower to do it," a firefighter explained. "So you have to resort to the basics."

Wallace said it is true that one is of the essence, especially in the first few minutes.

"As far as manning on the initial attack is concerned, he is correct," Wallace said. But, Wallace added, it is impossible to know if additional manpower could have prevented the second next day, Street Superintendent Clayton "Jug" Harrison stopped the service, citing a desire to cooperate with Cruse and Partney, the chairman of the City Council's Street and Alley Committee.

But Cruse, saying Harrison made citizens "suffer," severely chastised Harrison on June 2, saying he should not have ordered the service stopped until the ordinance becomes law.

A majority vote for final passage, signing by the mayor and publication in the newspaper are all required before an ordinance takes effect.

Ex-police commissioner sues newspaper

By Bonita Tillman
Staff writer

A Granite City woman sued the Belleville News-Democrat and reporter Jayne Matthews on Wednesday after alleging an October article placed her in a false light in the community.

Linda Irwin, a former member of the Granite City Board of Fire and Police Commission, alleged the newspaper published "unsubstantiated" allegations concerning the plaintiff that were highly offensive. The matter was her private concern and was "not of legitimate interest to the public at large," she added.

The article, which concerned the legal battles of Jerry Duncan, a Granite City police officer fighting for reinstatement after being fired by the commission, mentioned that Irwin had resigned from the panel two months before during another officer's case.

According to the lawsuit, the newspaper article stated that the second officer, John Apperson, allegedly had sent a letter to Irwin's husband accusing her of adultery. Apperson denied writing any such letter. Irwin denied the accusation against her and said her husband did not receive the alleged letter.

The News-Democrat acted with malice, the suit contends, and should have known the information was inaccurate and that publication would be highly offensive to Irwin.

Irwin is seeking more than $15,000 in the six-count lawsuit, which was filed in St. Clair County.

Battery by man alleged

Perry C. Luffman, 30, of Parktowne West was arrested at 5:55 p.m. June 10 and charged with battery. Angela D. Wallace, 24, of Parktowne West told police Luffman grabbed her by the hair, threw her to the floor, and threw a bottle at her. Luffman was lodged pending bail.

Wife slapping alleged

Roy L. Duncan, 49, of Fourth Street in Venice was arrested at 1:21 a.m. June 13 and charged with domestic battery.

Witnesses told police Duncan slapped his wife, Carol Duncan, 30, near the intersection of East 21st and Hall streets in Granite City.

Roy Duncan was released after posting $102 cash bail.

3 charges against man

Charles H. Feiner Jr., 37, of the 2200 block of Alexander Ave-

Officers said Feiner struck an officer with his fist, shoved officers and cursed as they tried to subdue him.

Hit, thrown to ground

Donald M. Jenkinson, 30, of the Granite City Lodge, 1209 Niedringhaus Ave., was arrested at 5:34 p.m. June 13 and booked for battery.

The alleged victim, Linda Wallace, 38, of the 1000 block of Kirkpatrick Homes told police Jenkinson hit her in the chest with his fist and knocked her against the wall of her apartment.

Wallace then sprayed him with a can of mace, she said. He then allegedly dragged her outdoors and threw her to the ground.

Jenkinson was released after posting $52 cash as bail.

Booked on five charges

Randall L. Peach, 32, of the 2800 block of Wayne Avenue was arrested at 3:10 a.m. June 13 and charged with driving under the influence, driving with a suspended license, driving with suspended registration and disobeying two stop signs.

An officer reported via radio that he observed a black 1981 Ford Fairmont speeding east on East 27th Street and passing a stop sign at East 27th and Henry streets. Another officer reported observing the vehicle pass a stop sign at East 27th and turn north on Nameoki Road.

The vehicle was stopped at Faith Avenue and Nameoki Road. Peach was lodged pending $302 cash bail.

Two face drug charge

Joey R. Focht Jr., 26, of the 4500 block of Maryville Road and Donald J. Lindsey, 31, of the 1000 block of Washington Avenue in Madison were arrested at 12:55 a.m. June 13 and charged with unlawful possession of cannabis.

Officers reported seeing Focht and Lindsey smoking a cigarette believed to contain cannabis while the two were sitting in a beer garden at Gabby's Tavern, 1890 State St.

Housing bill dies in Senate

SPRINGFIELD — A bill intended to revive housing in decaying areas of cities will need to be revived itself again.

Rep. Jim McPike, D-Alton, said Tuesday he will look for another bill to carry his proposal after his original bill got caught in the Senate Rules Committee. The bill had passed the House without opposition, but languished in the Senate committee until a deadline for consideration passed. It was one of dozens of House bills killed in the Senate committee this year.

The measure would allow home-rule municipalities with 25,000 or more people to grant real estate tax breaks for up to 10 years for new housing in areas of urban decay.

Last year, a similar bill passed the Legislature but was vetoed by Gov. Jim Edgar.

The new bill includes changes sought by Edgar's office and has the governor's support. A restriction was added that the tax breaks in any given year not exceed 2 percent of the taxes extended within the township on residential dwellings with six units or fewer.

The revised legislation also includes a requirement that the abatements be reduced by 20 percent increments during the last four years of the tax-break period.

The bill also sets up an Abatement Review Board with members of all affected taxing bodies that would review and make recommendations in a 45-day period before a final ordinance is granted by the city council. The board could not block an abatement, however.

The real estate tax abatements could be granted for newly constructed owner-occupied single-family or duplex units in areas that meet various criteria for urban decay.

County auditor candidates spar

The Republican challenger for Madison County auditor says the Democratic incumbent has rewarded his campaign treasurer with tax dollars.

But Auditor Fred Bathon says his accuser, Gary Henderson of Glen Carbon, is fabricating an issue.

Henderson said Bathon's campaign treasurer, Patricia Ward, an employee in the auditor's office, is the highest-paid employee there and has received pay raises of 10 percent, 6 percent and 16 percent in the three years Bathon has been auditor.

"This is not the way to run an office, period," Henderson said. But Bathon said Henderson apparently misunderstood payroll documents he got from the county. Bathon said Ward has received no raise since December 1990, when she got a 2 percent increase.

"If she got more (over a full year), it's because she worked more hours or something," he said.

said. "That's not the same thing as a raise."

Bathon said Ward is a dedicated, conscientious worker and the senior employee in the office, with 11 years on the job. Ward has earned a business degree since Bathon took office in 1988, the auditor said.

"I resent his attack on a valuable employee," Bathon said. "It's a cheap shot. He can attack me. I'm a public official. I'm fair game."

But Henderson called the situation immoral and unethical. "The watchdog of the taxpayer is watching as he uses tax dollars to reward his campaign treasurer to help him get elected," Henderson said.

Bathon said he asked Ward to be campaign treasurer because he trusted her to do a good job.

When the EPA cries wolf

Almost everyone is familiar with the fable of The Boy Who Cried "Wolf!" We all know the moral of the story: If you start telling lies, people won't believe you when you tell the truth.

Few people, however, remember that the wolf in the fable was very real and in a tragic end, both the sheep and the boy were killed and devoured.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency first cried "Wolf!" here in 1983 when the secondary lead smelter at Taracorp was closed and its former site and scrap pile were placed on the Superfund cleanup list.

People here responded to the EPA, letting the agency know that past owners of the facility had sold the lead-contaminated scrap material to local contractors, who had then used it for paving and fill.

In 1989, the EPA again cried "Wolf!" and identified an immediate problem of lead contamination in the Granite City and Madison area within a half-mile of the scrap pile and in areas where the scrap was used in Venice and Eagle Park.

Again the people responded. People in the identified areas gave up vegetable gardening, made sure their children ate a balanced diet and made sure their children washed their hands before eating.

The next time the EPA cried "Wolf!" was in 1990 when it presented its cleanup plan and alternatives to the people. Again, the people responded, both at a public hearing and throughout the public comment period.

But people were becoming skeptical. Although nothing had changed locally during those seven years — the pile was still there and the scrap was still in alleys and yards — each time the EPA cried "Wolf!" the wolf as just a little bigger and a little more ferocious.

Now, the EPA said, people living a mile or more from the pile were in danger and its recommended plan called for digging up hundreds of yards and hauling the dirt to the scrap pile. But the pile itself, the EPA said, is too expensive and dangerous to move. So, it must be left in place.

The people said, "If it's dangerous, let's get rid of it once and for all." And the public comments — which even the EPA conceded were well thought out and well documented — were overwhelmingly in favor of removing the pile and other scrap material, but leaving the yards alone.

But the EPA's cleanup plan, that plan ended up being opposed in federal court and, most recently, before the U.S. Congress. The plan is not opposed because the lead contamination danger doesn't exist, but because the danger is not where the EPA says it is.

So, nearly 10 years after it was identified as dangerous enough to merit national attention, the scrap pile remains untouched and, as illustrated in the photograph of the fallen fence in last week's Press-Record, unguarded.

In the original fable, tragedy could have been avoided if the wolf had been caught and killed the very first time the boy cried "Wolf!" Unfortunately, that wouldn't have left the fable with much of a moral.

In our local fable, everything would have been simpler if the scrap pile had been removed in 1983. By now, the whole thing would have been forgotten.

Perhaps that's the trouble. Perhaps, like the little boy in the original fable, the EPA enjoys the hoopla it creates by crying "Wolf!" more than it fears the wolf itself. Perhaps the EPA deserves the same fate as the little boy. Perhaps we wish the EPA would meet that fate.

But, just as the little boy was charged with the safety of his sheep, the EPA is charged with our safety. We know the fate of the sheep. In order to make sure we don't meet the same fate, our local fable needs a different moral.

We would suggest: "Forget the Hoopla. Just Do Your Job."

Simon would accept No. 2 place on Bill Clinton ticket

(The following column was written by Robert Estill of Copley News Service.)

The prospect of surrendering his Senate seat to a Republican apparently would not deter Sen. Paul Simon for a second if the Illinois Democrat is given a chance at the vice presidency on a ticket headed by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

Simon, whose political idol is the late U.S. Sen. Paul Douglas, always has found personal satisfaction in winning the Senate seat that Douglas lost to Republican Charles Percy in 1966.

But when asked if he is concerned about the ticket that seat to a Republican if he were to become vice president, Simon voiced not a word of concern. Instead, he spoke of the presumed benefits for his state and party.

Simon said, "obvious" that he could do "much more" for Illinois as a vice president than as a U.S. senator. Simon previously has spoken disdainfully about the vice presidency too often being a "ceremonial" post.

Simon, 63, noted that he would not be leaving the Senate entirely because the vice president also serves as Senate president and can vote to break ties.

In practice, the vice president rarely sits in the Senate or has a chance to be a tie-breaker.

And, finally, he would be doing it for the good of his party.

"In terms of the Democratic party generally, if my being on the ticket would help carry the White House, that's much more important than one seat in the United States Senate," Simon said.

Simon could boost Clinton's chances of carrying Illinois because the popular, personable senator got nearly two-thirds of the vote in 1990 in a state that President George Bush, then vice president, barely won in 1988.

Re-elected to a second six-year Senate term in 1990, Simon could run for the vice presidency without abandoning the Senate seat.

However, if Simon was elected vice president, Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar, a Republican, could appoint a Republican to take Simon's Senate seat until the 1994 elections, when Illinois voters would choose someone to fill the two years then remaining in what was Simon's six-year term.

Edgar's choice would have time and opportunity to establish his or her name and reputation, giving Republicans a chance for a longer lease on the Senate seat Simon wrestled in 1984 from Percy.

The last time an Illinois governor got to appoint a U.S. senator was in 1969, when Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen, a Republican, died 10 months after winning a fourth six-year term in 1968.

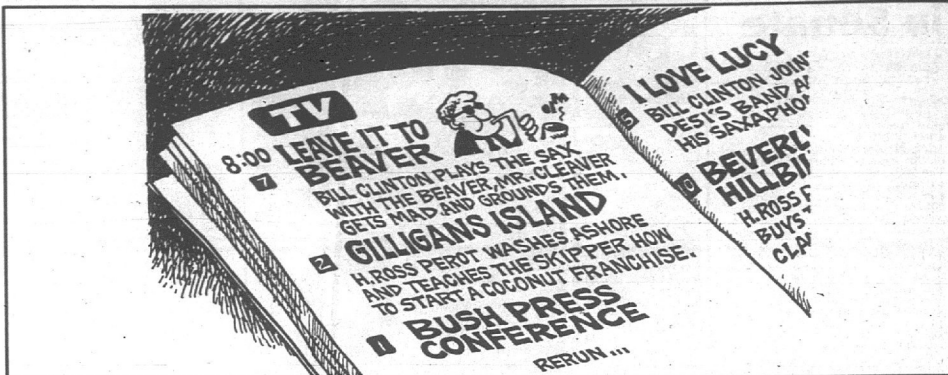

Gov. Richard Ogilvie named a fellow Republican, Illinois House Speaker Ralph T. Smith, to serve until the 1970 election, when Democrat Adlai Stevenson overwhelmed Smith in a battle for the four-year remainder in the term.

Eric Schulz of Alton is the first staffer for Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., who was defeated in the March 17 primary, to take a job with Simon.

Schulz, who directed Dixon's legislative correspondence, will be doing similar work on Simon's staff by editing the senator's column and all outgoing mail.

He succeeds Pamela Huey, who is joining her husband, a former staffer with the bankrupt United Press International, who landed a job at the Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune.

David Carle, Simon's press aide, said he expects some other Dixon staffers will be hired when vacancies occur.

Perot would give citizens a voice in shaping their future

(Comments by Lee Presser, Madison County coordinator for Illinois Citizens for Perot.)

During ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" May 31, George Will pronounced Ross Perot's presidential candidacy a fad.

Will doesn't understand that Ross Perot is not the issue before him. The issue which media pundits regularly misinterpret and then misrepresent is the fact of a grassroots political activation of citizens in every pollable category.

Ross Perot has succeeded by giving people a chance to build their own organization, separate from Democrats or Republicans.

He succeeded by having his people build state organizations on their own time and at their own expense (in many cases) to put him on the presidential ballot.

In many states, getting on the ballot is a daunting challenge, with many legal roadblocks designed to limit access to the ballot. By being forced to quickly learn all the rules and be creative, these organizations have succeeded.

Most significantly, they did it by giving real decision-making power to the worker in the field. Organizational growth has been so explosive that a corporate type bureaucracy would have limited flexibility and cause failure of the petition campaigns.

People in the "trenches" like the feeling of building an organization and thereby shaping their own future. They have the pride of ownership. They will not easily go back to being told when and what to think.

Seen in hindsight, historians might say it was in 1992 when the American people took their first steps which led to recapitulating government from a seemingly impenetrable governing class — a class which pays itself every time it takes taxes out of a paycheck.

Books might say that a change of leadership then sparked a reorganization of government institutions and processes. People changed their level of involvement when they discovered it was possible to better service the public by letting the people invent the process.

In essence, Ross Perot enthusiastically is ready for a political reorganization which will benefit us, our children and our grandchildren. Change has been needed for a long time; everyone has recognized that. But, few wanted to buck the system.

Finally, people realized that not bucking the system — letting the governing class have its way — has cost everyone the financial stability of the country. Our standard of living has dropped and we are in a race with other western and Asian countries for our economic lives.

New economic realities have forced America to think creatively. People want to get involved and have their say.

"You say you want a revolution? Well, let me see the plan." This political activation may be that long-delayed revolution once sung about by the Beatles.

Following a Perot presidential victory in November, the process of government will change because the next Congress will be responsive in an effort to save their $129,000 a year jobs.

Ross Perot's popularity is based on the promise that he will implement change.

Anyone interested in Mr. Perot, you will hear him say, "I'm looking for a mechanism to deliver better services, directly to those requiring them."

He wants the American people to figure out how to do it better, cheaper and in a more streamlined, honest fashion by utilizing their organizational genius.

The thought of having a voice in that process has electrified a previously uninvolved public. They have found a national leader who is ready to listen and learn from the on-site workers how to cut through the red tape and get the job done.

The Perot phenomenon is about fundamental change like that in 1776 and in 1860.

The old guard, Bush and Clinton, are being unplugged from power and new people with new organizational ideas are about to be plugged in.

The Perot phenomenon in having a voice, in addition to a vote, should volunteer now.

Lawyer defends rights of adults

TO THE EDITOR: The opinion of the Press-Record regarding the attempt by Deja Vu to open up an adult entertainment facility at Stages is far from old-fashioned.

The thinking contained in the two editorials (June 4 and 11) regarding Stages is a recent line of thought, one which seeks to eradicate the basic, fundamental rights granted all citizens of the United States.

The opinion of the Press-Record is nothing more than an attack on the First Amendment to the United States Constitution. What makes the position of the Press-Record so abhorrent is that it is the very Amendment it seeks to render meaningless that allows it to freely publish its opinion.

I never stated that Deja Vu would only attract the best customers.

I stated that Deja Vu would, like the existing nightclubs in the area that offer adult entertainment, attract doctors, lawyers and accountants. The Press-Record's attempt to hide behind alleged police reports upon which it bases its conclusions reek of McCarthyism.

It is grotesquely irresponsible for the Press-Record to slander the reputations and the thousands of individuals who work in the industry. It is also inexcusable to blindly judge the individuals who will be employed there as well as its guests.

Certainly, have not reached the conclusion that all newspaper editors are irresponsible propagandists merely because some are employed at the Press-Record.

To print irresponsible journalism, disinformation and a philosophy clearly out of step with the mainstream should not in any way be dressed up as old-fashioned thought about nude dancing.

That is a gross insult to all those who rightly believe in concepts foreign to the Press-Record, those of free speech and expression, the right of the majority not to be governed by tyranny of the minority, and a view of adults as responsible individuals who have the ability to make up their own mind on issues such as this.

The Press-Record has a right under the First Amendment to print its view. It is a right that I respect and defend. It does not, though, make it legally, ethically or morally right.

The fortunate thing is that, while the Press-Record may espouse its view, it cannot enforce its position on the community.

Sports building dream a reality

TO THE EDITOR: Congratulations to the Granite City Sports Hall of Fame committee on the dedication of their building.

As has been suggested, it is a dream come true and an excellent addition to the community. Not only will the building house sports memorabilia and help preserve the rich heritage and tradition of Granite City athletics, but it can serve as an inspiration to our youth and a fountainhead of community pride.

Best of all, it stands as a monument to what can be done — without the use of tax dollars — by dedicated, industrious people of all ages banded together with a common goal.

And it is more than a sports building honoring athletic accomplishments. The structure, valued in excess of $300,000, contains new, sorely needed restrooms for public use at athletic contests, a spacious cooking area and a new concession stand, ticket booths and storage space for Granite City High School.

It grew from the germ of an idea conceived by Al Barnes six years ago.

It was nurtured by his efforts and the work of a host of individuals, such as the officers: chairman for the past five years, incoming chairman Les Thompson, secretary Jerry Walters, treasurer Dick Portell and Bill Schooley, who worked quietly behind the scenes. Without his advice and generosity, the dream would never have become a reality.

Abetted by the support of the community, they cooked pork steaks, shish kebabs and bratwurst, held golf tournaments, ran bingo games, hosted banquets, sold advertising and, yes, even begged money.

Perhaps the biggest contributors were the youngsters in the high school's vocational education classes and their instructors. They more than satisfied their class requirements by toiling endless extra hours in a workmanlike, professional manner.

The Hall of Fame Committee members continue to work to retire the debt of approximately $40,000 and to see the mortgage burned.

The most heartening news is that, once this occurs, they will continue to hold their annual events. The purpose is to provide scholarships for our scholars-athletes.

City OKs too many stop signs

TO THE EDITOR: What is going on with all the stop signs in Granite City? Will we have a stop sign on every corner? How dumb can our leaders be?

No one is coming downtown and shopping when they have a lot of confusion and aggravation.

Would it not be better if you could come into the city on Missouri Avenue, stop at West 22nd and go across town to Edwardsville Road with only two lights? Also, due to the fire station in West Granite, why not be able to go from Rock Road to Missouri Avenue with no stops? Simple isn't it? Just think how much better traffic could flow.

If you, elected officials, cannot act responsibly, then on election day we should put our "X" into another stop on the ballot.

Need to contact

TO THE EDITOR: Some members of the Granite City High School class of 1972 are planning a 20-year reunion.

I'm disappointed in the members of the reunion committee who (I believe) have made no attempt to contact many members of this class, not only for the upcoming 20th reunion, but the 15-year reunion as well.

Many of us still have parents or family members who are listed in the local telephone directory, and yet no attempt was made to contact them.

I feel personally offended by this omission, but my wishes are that they enjoy their reunion.

Local theater: All work, no pay, much joy

By Jim Haverstick
Staff writer

Marlon Brando earned $5 million in 1978 for a 10-minute appearance in the movie "Superman." But Beverly Scroggins, a performer and director at Summerstage productions, has worked in community theater for 30 years and has never received a dime for her efforts.

She doesn't mind a bit. No one else in the cast or crew of her shows is getting paid, either.

That is what community theater is about — all work and no pay.

Ordinary people act, sing, dance and wear pancake makeup just like the pros but without the salary. They also build sets, light the lights, pull the curtain and even sell tickets to be able to perform.

Considering that some actors get big bucks, a share of the profits and a hot tub in their dressing room to appear in films, it may seem crazy for other actors to perform for free.

But, strangely enough, there are some people who perform just for the fun of it. The Metro East area boasts a few hundred such devoted freebie actors, including many Granite City area residents who perform in Summerstage and Showtime Express productions here.

"There are a lot of talented people in this area and many of them just don't have the intense desire to spend their lives trying to make it in professional theater," Scroggins said. "You can spend a lifetime just making a meager living in the theater."

"There are people who don't want to do that but still love the theater and still love to perform."

Brett Hanke of Granite City is one such performer.

In addition to his vocation as city engineer and public works director, Hanke teaches martial arts classes and is in the U.S. Army Reserves. But Hanke, who has been involved with community theater since he graduated from high school, finds the time to perform because "it's fun."

Hanke has appeared in several Summerstage and Showtime Express productions in Granite City.

I guess there is a certain amount of feeling your ego. Getting up in front of a bunch of people and performing is a rush, a natural high. But it's also scary."

Sometimes emergencies arise, but "the show must go on."

When a cast member was unable to perform in a local production of "The Sound of Music," Hanke was called at 3 p.m. to learn a part for a performance that same evening.

The show went off without a hitch. Locally, Summerstage is currently preparing for its next production, "Fiddler on the Roof," for July 31 and Aug. 1, 6, 7, 8 and 9 at the Summerstage Playhouse.

For Scroggins, who will direct the show, will be a case of doing for free what she gets paid to do at other times: She teaches speech and drama at Granite City High School.

Over the last 22 years at the high school, she has directed at least 40 shows and worked on the technical crew of many others.

Her community theater directing credits include "South Pacific," "The Sound of Music," "Into the Woods" and "Steel Magnolias."

Some of her favorite acting roles include the wife in "I Do, I Do," a musical about love and marriage, and the assassin, Charlotte Corday, in "Mara/Sade," a drama about the French revolution.

Gigi Dowling, a long-standing member of the Looking Glass Playhouse in Lebanon, feels much the same way about community theater as Scroggins does.

"For many, performing is important and making it your life's work is important," Dowling said. "For me, it is just the performing that is important."

Dowling of Lebanon started out in school plays and studied acting and singing. But she did not choose show business as a career. She is a social worker with the Mascoutah School District.

Her acting credits include the title role in "Mame" and Rose in "Gypsy." She recently played Fanny Brice's mother in "Funny Girl." Her directing credits include "Extremities," "The Odd Couple" and "Of Mice and Men."

Dowling also thinks community theater is good for the community. Besides drawing people together for a common goal, it is an inexpensive form of entertainment both for performers and the audience.

Scroggins agrees: "Professional theater is so expensive that the average person can't afford to pay $30 a seat to see a play. And if you go to New York, it is two or three times as much."

There are more than 120 community theater groups in Illinois, according to the Illinois Arts Council.

At least six community theater groups perform in the Metro East area, including Summerstage and Showtime Express, both based in Granite City, the Looking Glass in Lebanon, Miner's Institute Theater in Collinsville, Comet Productions in Belleville and the Breeze Showhouse.

The Illinois Arts Council provided more than $700,000 in grants to theater groups this year.

For ordinary folk, community theater is a chance to live out a fantasy. It is a chance to be a star for a little while, but keep both feet on the ground.

On any local stage it is easy to find a bevy of lawyers, half a dozen Air Force personnel, a lab technician, a hospital administrator, a dairy farmer, an airplane mechanic, a dermatologist, a veterinarian, a dentist, high school students, and even a reporter, all trying, to be bigger than life for a while.

Shelley Stuart of Maryville, who recently directed "The Foreigner" at the Miner's Theater, said she gets a great deal of personal satisfaction from acting in and directing plays.

"There is a sense of accomplishment when working on a play, both on stage and in the director's chair," she said.

Stuart, who also directed "Rehearsal for Murder" at Miner's Theater, hopes to someday work professionally in theater. She is working in community theater to learn the craft.

One thing most community theater performers will agree on is that they love the people they work with in the theater. "It is like a big family. Everyone is working together for a common goal," Scroggins said.

A confession: Applause makes it all worthwhile

"My life is a nightmare, my life is a nightmare, my life is a nightmare." This is the message I have left on a friend's answering machine at least once during every community theater production that I've been involved in.

Shows always start out well, but somewhere in the middle I realize I'm too busy, I can never get to the theater on time, I can't dance, I can't sing, I can't remember my lines and I don't like wearing stage makeup.

Though I say I love it, during rehearsals I am truly hard pressed to find a reason why I love acting in community theater.

I have split my pants in two different shows, scraped all the skin off of my shins falling through a trap door in a stage, watched an actor's foot be crushed by a falling light and watched another actor break his ribs falling down a stair case.

I have been so frustrated and angry with directors and cast members that I have come close to quitting shows.

But then opening night rolls around and suddenly all my feelings change.

The frustration and anxiety subside when I step out on stage.

Out of the six shows I have been in, I have only had one substantial role. I often joke about having only 10 or 12 lines.

But once on stage I realize that those lines are important to the rest of the show and I am making an important contribution.

There is no feeling that can compare to having 200 people laugh at your jokes and applaud for you. This feeling makes all of the agonizing rehearsals worthwhile.

I must confess, I too am a ham.

— Jim Haverstick

YOUTH FOCUS: What's the best summer job to have? The worst?

(Asked of students at Madison High School and Venice High School.)

Patrick McKinney, Madison
"The best summer job to have is a pool installer/technician because a person gets to meet a lot of interesting people in his/her area."

Carol Horton, Venice
"The best summer job to have is the one you enjoy the most, the one that you can communicate the most. The best summer job for me is the one that I'm setting a career for."

Brian Peterson, Madison
"The best summer job to have is to work in a restaurant because a person can meet lots of nice people."

Shawnice Williams, Venice
"The best summer job to have is to work in an office-type of job with air conditioning."

Matthew Szerzinski, Madison
"The best summer job to have is cutting grass because a person gets to be outside and everyone needs his grass cut but not everyone has a lawnmower."

Tiffany King, Venice
"The best job to have is to work at a grocery store."

Jurea Melton, Venice
"To work with small children. I would like to work inside of a day-care center. The best job in general terms is one that keeps you inside and keeps you cool, not working in the sun."

Donna Widel, Madison
"The best summer job is working at McDonald's because a person can make easy money."

Delphine Gladney, Venice
"The best summer job to have is just to have a job. There is not a best job, but there might be a good summer job, a job that pays the amount well for your ability."

Eric Coleman, Madison
"The best summer job to have is working outdoors being an environmentalist because it is good for people to experience nature."

Eric Coleman, Madison
"The worst jobs have to be working indoors as a janitor, because a person does not experience the great outdoors and is always cramped inside."

Donna Widel, Madison
"The worst summer job I have had was babysitting because I didn't make any money and had to watch someone's spoiled child."

Rail crossing accidents at all-time low in state

Railroad crossing accidents in Illinois were at an all-time low last year, according to Secretary of State George H. Ryan and Illinois Commerce Commission Chairman Ellen C. Craig.

Quoting an ICC report, Ryan said 291 collisions were recorded at public railroad grade crossings during 1991, the lowest number recorded during the 47 years statistics have been kept.

Moreover, a near-record low of 42 fatalities resulted from these collisions, slightly above the record low of 40 set in 1983. Motor vehicle passengers accounted for 27 fatalities, while 15 were pedestrians.

"Railroad crossing accidents have been a problem since the first road was built across a railroad track," Ryan said in a Capitol news conference.

"While more crossings than ever are equipped with automatic warning devices, motorists are still choosing to ignore them and trying to beat the train. And, too often they lose."

The ICC's annual report is part of a continued effort to pro-

note rail crossing safety through a program called "Operation Lifesaver."

The program is a cooperative state and national education effort geared to reduce collisions, injuries and fatalities at railroad crossings through education.

"As good as the 1991 statistics seem, we are still concerned about the high percentage of accidents and fatalities at Illinois' railroad crossings with automatic warning devices," Craig said.

"Installing more warning signals can help only so much. Illinois drivers and the law enforcement community hold the key to any further substantial reductions."

"Operation Lifesaver" is promoted by the Illinois Grade Crossing Safety Council, which includes the Secretary of State's office, the Commerce Commission, the Illinois Department of Transportation, the State Board of Education, Illinois State Police, the railroad industry, labor organizations and numerous civic and safety groups.

THE LAW AND YOU

By RICK REED
Attorney At Law

When a person is involved in an automobile accident, should he submit a claim to his own car insurance company? Many automobile insurance carriers now claim they are losing money, and several are raising rates and refusing to renew coverage on certain high-risk drivers. In a given case, a person must weigh the benefits of submitting the claim against the possibility of having higher premiums or facing cancellation.

Several years ago, automobile insurance carriers only raised premiums if a driver was at fault in a given accident. Many automobile carriers now have taken the position that if you use your insurance in any manner, this will be used as a basis for raising premiums.

For example, let's assume you are involved in a collision, and the other driver is at fault. Even though you were not negligent, you may find it necessary to submit a property damage claim to your own company. This could occur because the other company refuses to pay for your car in a timely manner or because the driver at fault was uninsured. Some companies who pay to have a car fixed in this situation will use this as a basis to raise the innocent driver's rates when the policy comes due.

A person who recently came to this office had been involved in three accidents in an 18-month period of time. None of the accidents had been her fault. The company indicated that her car insurance would not be renewed. The underwriter indicated that the company was in the process of re-evaluating all drivers and not renewing people who were considered high-risk. The company representative stated that they were refusing to renew not only bad drivers but also drivers who were "unlucky."

It is obvious from this case that the less often a driver submits a claim under his automobile insurance, the more likely he is to keep his premiums at a reasonable level and maintain the insurance in force. It should be noted that the criteria for rate increases and cancellations will vary from company to company. Certainly, when one needs to use his automobile insurance, he should never hesitate to do so. Nevertheless, it seems to be the policy of some automobile insurance companies to have their agents sell the policy as cheaply as possible and then look for reasons to raise the rates at some later time.

Waste

"I know the street department is short of manpower. But it is a shame we can't get people to work together for the whole city," Whitaker told the council.

"I want the program to work, but I'm tired of fighting. The only way we can make this work is with the help of the superintendent of streets."

Alderman Jeff Worthen said political factions "doomed this program from the start."

"Let's call a truce," Worthen said. "Let's all get together for the good of the citizens of Granite City."

Harrison said his department has the equipment, but does not have the manpower necessary for the program.

"I could take care of the problem tomorrow," Harrison said. "I've got the equipment. Give me the manpower."

Cruse told Harrison to "find a way" to make the program work.

Alderman Dan Brown, who has announced his mayoral candidacy, told Cruse that suggestion lacks common sense.

"Who's going to suffer from this standoff?" Brown asked. "The people. The street department doesn't have the manpower. He just told you, it." Cruse responded, adding that cooperation and common sense will make the program work.

"We lack that," Brown said. Cruse asked Brown who lacked common sense.

"Where have you been the last 45 minutes?" Brown asked Cruse.

"Where have you been the last three years?" Cruse responded. Brown and 1st Ward Alderman Juanita Crawley both said the program just hasn't worked.

"They set up the program and had no way to work it," Brown said.

"It's just not working," Crawley said. "They've taken down bin after bin. But you can't tell that to (Whitaker)."

Worthen said the city should seek bids from waste haulers to provide the service under a contract.

Ward 5 Alderman Tom Candler suggested the street and sanitation departments be combined.

"You've got these two little departments fighting," Candler said. "Why don't you make them one and let them do their jobs?"

Whitaker, Worthen, Crawley and Aldermen Casner Skubish, Jim Miller, Craig Tarpo, Paul Fisk, and Timko and Dan Partney voted to give responsibility for the program to the street department.

Brown, Candler, and aldermen Ginny O'Beir and Sandy Crites voted against the proposal.

Alderman Walter Milton was out of the room when the vote was taken.

Tim Burton brings dark surrealism to 2nd 'Batman'

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

On a balmy Saturday afternoon, outside a movie theater in downtown Chicago, passersby were handed flyers touting a first-come, first-served screening of "Batman Returns." The recruited audience was to join some print and electronic press from all over the world to see a special screening of the much-awaited film, due to open officially Friday.

Warner Brothers, the studio that is releasing "Batman Returns" and that hosted the screening, wanted to make sure the folks from the press were inundated with wildly enthusiastic responses from "Batman's" most trusted and faithful constituency.

It never really happened. The eager crowd's noisy anticipation gradually gave way to fidgety boredom. When the screening was over, the audience filed out quietly, mumbling words like "morbid" and "weird" more than complimentary adjectives.

The man responsible for crafting both "Batman" pictures is 32-year-old director Tim Burton, whose legacy seems to be based on his ability to portray black, surreal humor and adventure. Among his previous films are "Beetlejuice" and "Edward Scissorhands."

Prior to his work as a feature film director, Burton, who is from Burbank, Calif., worked as an animator at Disney Studios after attending the California Institute of the Arts on a Disney Fellowship. This training has enabled Burton to lend an original, comic strip quality to almost every film he does, including "Batman Returns."

"Batman Returns" is not a sequel to "Batman," Burton says.

"It doesn't pick up where the first film left off. The sets for Gotham City are completely new. There are lots of new elements in the visuals and story line that haven't been seen before," he says. "Even Batman's costume has been revised."

The legend of Batman is incredibly well-developed and fertile," Burton says. "The heroes, the villains, supporting characters and story lines have been embellished over the years."

As in the first film, the thrust of this new story is Batman's challenge to save Gotham City from some of its most powerful and evil inhabitants.

These include a spiritless Christopher Walken as Max Shreck, Gotham's wealthiest citizen. Shreck has a clandestine plan to bleed Gotham of its electrical power for profit.

In addition to the central character of Batman, "Batman Returns" enabled Burton to introduce a flamboyant new arch-villain, known as The Penguin.

The Penguin was one of the comic strip's most popular bad guys, a verbose villain with an umbrella full of evil tricks. Danny DeVito was Burton's first and only choice to play The Penguin.

"The Penguin is actually a very intelligent man," DeVito says, "someone who has always wanted acceptance. He's a guy who is living one world in his mind and another in reality. I mean, his parents took one look at him when he was a baby and totally rejected him."

"But if they had tried to understand that there was a human being inside the hideous 'penguin boy,' he might have become another Einstein."

The villainous Penguin (Danny DeVito) and the mysterious Catwoman (Michelle Pfeiffer) plot the downfall of Batman, in "Batman Returns." The movie, which opens Friday at area theaters, also stars Michael Keaton as Batman.

Even DeVito's Penguin can't make 'Batman' fly

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

As one of the most anticipated movies of 1992, the sluggish "Batman Returns" may be a disappointment for even the most devoted fans of the original hit from 1989.

Although its story construction is very much like a sequel, with consistent references in the dialogue to events and people from the first film, director Tim Burton is on record as saying that "Batman Returns" is not designed to be a sequel.

Burton's goal was to update and improve the product with new characters and minor physical refinements. The result, however, is a movie too imbued with a false sense of its own importance. "Batman Returns" denies the audience of the one thing they want most from it — fun.

Showing just a touch of gray hair in his well-trimmed sideburns, Michael Keaton returns as Bruce Wayne/Batman.

Michelle Pfeiffer appears as Selina Kyle/Catwoman, Max's beleaguered assistant who is pushed out of a window by Max in his high rise office. She survives the fall and through some unfathomable metamorphosis was up as Catwoman.

Danny DeVito has what can be called the centerpiece role in "Batman Returns." DeVito plays Oscar Cobblepot/The Penguin. The film begins with the event of his birth. It is inferred that he is a hideously misshapen infant and shows how his wealthy parents, who are obviously unhappy that their offspring was born deformed, dumped him in a creek when he was just a baby.

Afterwards, it seems The Penguin was raised in the Penguin section of the Gotham City zoo, after floating his way into the compound. He grows to adulthood (or Penguinhood, whichever you prefer) and recruits his fellow penguins to help him exact revenge and search for his real identity.

Michael Murphy appears as Gotham's beleaguered and dishonest mayor. Pat Hingle returns to play Police Commissioner Gordon. Michael Gough is back as Batman's faithful butler, Alfred. Pee Wee Herman has an unbilled cameo under heavy makeup as the Penguin's father.

"Batman Returns" is a morbid, drawn-out film full of cheap laughs that don't work. Danny DeVito is a splendid actor, but his brooding, grunting, hideous Penguin is a joyless characterization. It robs this second effort of the biting humor and the delightfully villainous pranks that made Jack Nicholson's work the standout element of the original.

With all due respect to its technical prowess and worthy ambition, "Batman Returns" waddles and flops along like the many penguins who are in the picture. With all that it is, it isn't entertaining.

Rated PG-13.

Batman (Michael Keaton) confronts the villainous Penguin, who vows to destroy Gotham City.

Nunes' dash makes Triplets 5-0

Baserunning, Marshall's pitching lead to 4-3 win over Collinsville

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

The Triplets aren't hitting much yet. But they are pitching and running.

Post 113 managed only four hits off Collinsville lefty Joe Muniz on Tuesday, but Marshall's pitching and Les Nunes' daring baserunning added up to a 4-3 win at Varsity Field. While it was Collinsville's first District 22 game, the Triplets improved to 5-0 heading into Wednesday's game in Marietta prior to the Louisville Slugger Invitational in Danville this weekend (see related story).

Les Nunes

"We had some plays to make in the fifth inning and didn't do it," said Collinsville manager Tom Calza. "You have to have decent pitching and a good defense to win. I don't care what you hit. (Collinsville High School) hit the ball extremely well this year, but Belleville West went to state because of pitching and defense."

shall in the first. Muniz walked with two outs. Kevin Kriemeyer singled and Chris Bonebrake doubled them both home.

"Drake always tries to overthrow early in the game," said Triplets manager Ralph Burnett. "But you can tell when he finds his stuff."

Marshall struck out 10 in winning his second game in as many starts this summer after a 1-6 high school season. That included a 9-0 loss to Collinsville. He has struck out 21 in two Legion games.

"High school is gone and (see GAME, Page 2B)

Jason Maxfield of Post 113 follows through and watches as he singles up the middle to drive in two runs in the fifth inning of Tuesday's game. Maxfield's hit tied the game and set up the winning run.

Junior Triplets win 4th straight

The Junior Triplets are starting to flash some of the form shown last summer on the way to the state championship.

Post 113 won its fourth straight game and improved to 6-2 with an 8-0 whitewashing in Alton on Tuesday. Doug Winfield's team didn't waste any time averaging a 2-0 loss to Edwardsville on Saturday by winning the second game of that double-header, 14-3. It took them six days to pay Alton back for a 7-3 loss.

But it was worth the wait for lefthander Mark Winfield. He walked six in 3½ innings while taking the loss last week, but didn't walk anyone in pitching a seven-hit shutout Tuesday.

"That was good to see from Mark after the way he threw against Alton last week," said Doug Winfield. "We're starting to play like we can. The first few games were kind of a slow start."

Donald Harris had three RBIs Tuesday, including two in the first inning as the Junior Triplets took a quick 3-0 lead. Jeff Ridenour had a two-run double to finish the scoring in the sixth. Granite City had nine hits. Winfield struck out only three, but scattered the seven hits and used his control.

Jason Black got the win in Sunday afternoon's 5-1 triumph over Cahokia, but the big game was Sunday night in O'Fallon. Harris tied the game with a two-out single in the seventh, then the Junior Triplets scored three times in the 10th for an 8-5 win over the previously unbeaten home team.

Brian Kohler walked to lead off the 10th and Harris bunted for a hit. Kohler went to third on the play.

at first and scored on a wild throw. Roe followed with an RBI triple and David Fuhrman doubled for another run. Ridenour got the win in relief.

After playing in Belleville last night, the Junior Triplets have four games this weekend including a 7:30 p.m. home game Saturday against Evansville, Ind.

Post 113 in weekend tournament at stadium where 'The Babe' filmed

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

The Triplets seem to be just playing good baseball, but they might also be auditioning for Hollywood.

Last year — and again next month — Post 113 played at Bosse Field in Evansville, Ind., where "A League of Their Own," a soon-to-be-released movie starring Tom Hanks and Madonna, was filmed. This weekend the Triplets play at Danville Stadium, where John Goodman filmed "The Babe."

That's part of the inaugural Louisville Slugger Invitational, a 16-team tournament that begins today and runs through Sunday. Granite City is in a division with Champaign Post 24, Danville Schlarmann and Bradley Palomino.

The Triplets will play Danville (3 p.m.) and Bradley (5:30) on Friday at Danville Stadium. Next up is perennial powerhouse Palatine Post 690 at 9 a.m. Saturday at Fountain Central High School in Veedersburg, Ind. The Triplets complete round robin play with a 6 p.m. game Saturday against Champaign.

"We have to win Friday before we can worry about playing Sunday," said Post 113 manager Ralph Burnett. "We think we have a lot of pitching, and we'll get a chance to show it this weekend. We have to make sure we're ready to play Belleville on Monday, because that's a big league game. But it would be something special to win a tour (see DANVILLE, Page 2B)

The winners of each of the four divisions advance to semifinals Sunday in Danville, with the championship game to follow.

"We were originally planning on a 10-team tournament," said Ken Pasco, manager of Danville Post 210 and the tournament director. "We also were looking at a wooden bat tournament. But then a friend of mine who works for Louisville Slugger got involved and started helping me out."

"They became a sponsor and then other teams began hearing about it and called us. We wanted to stay away from too many of the local teams."

Teams from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa are involved. Each team will play each of the other three teams in its division, plus one team in another division. Head-to-head competition will be the tiebreaker for advancement. In case of a three-way tie, the second tiebreaker is fewest runs given up. A third tiebreaker is total hits.

"Granite City has to be one of the teams considered a favorite due to their success in recent years," said Pasco. "I know they have plenty of pitching."

That comes in handy since the winning team will have to play six games. And since the Triplets don't play until Friday, they would have to play six games in just over 48 hours to win.

Drake Marshall, Ryan Reeves, Joe Rieser and Ben Hiehl will all get a turn. Chris Hill, Randy Scott and Jeff Miller will almost certainly have to contribute if the Triplets are to advance to Sunday's championship round.

"Palatine always has one of the top Legion programs in Illinois," said Pasco. "The Connie Mack team from Iowa should be very good, and two of the Indiana teams (Kokomo and Carmel) have good reputations. Danville Schlarmann just finished fourth in the Illinois (Class A) state tournament. I look at it as a wide open tournament."

With 35 games scheduled over four days, weather is the chief concern.

"They're talking about a slight chance of rain Thursday morning, but we're hoping it will be OK after that," said Pasco. "We have a tarp at Danville Stadium, but not at the other two fields."

In addition, Danville Stadium, Garfield Park in Danville will host games as will Fountain Central High School in Veedsburg, Ind., about 15 miles away.

Taking it easy

Baker relaxes, takes 6th in national meet

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

The step up to national competition, at least for now, was nothing but fun for Jenny Baker. Baker, Granite City High School's All-American diver, placed sixth out of six in the National High School Swimming and Diving Championships on Saturday at New Trier High School in Winnetka, Ill. While the pressure was on during state competition during the fall, this weekend featured a relaxed atmosphere.

"There was nothing stressful about it at all," said Baker, headed for the University of Kentucky on a diving scholarship. "There weren't that many people watching and it was very quiet. They aren't used to quiet. We usually have lots of little kids running around making noise. We had them turn on the radio, so we were diving in the oldies."

Jennifer Dixon of Michigan placed first in the competition, which was by invitation only to the top six high school senior divers in the nation as determined by tapes sent in by each of the competitors. Baker was less than 50 points behind her, and was a point and a half behind Minnesota's Jennifer Cook for fifth place.

"There must be something about that pool that leaves me a point and a half short," said Baker, referring to the margin by which she placed second in last year's state meet in Winnetka.

But she really didn't seem to mind.

"The whole thing was relaxation," Baker said. "One of the guys said the competition was just a prelude to the pizza party, and he was right."

The weekend was sponsored by All-State Insurance, Ocean Swimwear and Daktronics.

"I wasn't too disappointed in my performance considering I only trained three days for it," said Baker. "I wanted to be a part of the swim meet because the divers are usually separated. We had three diving relays and won them."

"All the other girls were really great and I made some more friends."

Junior Olympic competition in Cleveland is next later this summer, with the finals slated for Austin, Tex. The 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta are way in the back of Baker's mind, but in her mind nonetheless.

"Right now I'm just thinking about college and the NCAA's," she said. "But you can never give up on the Olympics."

there's a summer season to be played," said Burnett. "Fundamentally, this team is better than ever, so Drake just has to pitch like he can and he'll be fine."

Post 113 got one run back in the fourth on Billy Van Buskirk's fielder's choice after John Coziar had singled Ryan Reeves to third. Coziar had two of Granite City's four hits.

Collinsville made it 3-1 in the fifth on a two-out RBI single by Curt Porcha. But the Triplets scratched for three runs in their half of the fifth. Mike Dochwal walked and third baseman Steve Guismond made a wild throw on Marc Patton's grounder, with the runners ending up at second and third. Jason Maxfield then singled to center to score both.

Nunes hit into a fielder's choice, but second baseman Kevin Kriemeyer threw wide of first or it would have been a double play. Nunes was sent to second originally, but was sent back when it was ruled the ball had not gone out of play.

That paid off when Ryan Reeves grounded to short. Nunes never hesitated and took off for third as Reeves was retired at first. First baseman Mike Peskar's throw to third was in the dirt and skipped past Guismond as Nunes scored.

"Les never thought about anything but third on that play," said Burnett. "It turned out better for us that he was sent back to first, because that play wouldn't have unfolded that way."

Elks have golf tourney at the Legacy June 28

The Granite City Elks Youth Athletics Committee will sponsor an adult golf tournament for those individuals 21 and older June 28.

The tournament will be at the Legacy and begins at 8 a.m. with a shotgun start. There will be championship A, B and C flights. The cost of $200 per team includes 18 holes of golf, beer and soda, and dinner at the Legacy clubhouse.

First-place prizes include $50 per person for the championship flight team, and $25 per person for flights A, B and C. Hole-in-one prizes include a 1992 Buick Skylark courtesy of Laura Buick, and a trip to Germany.

To enter, contact Bob Little at 931-1409, Randy Witter at 797-1463, or the Legacy. The entry deadline is June 19.

each year," said Collinsville High track coach El Eschman, organizer of the meets. "Last year we had about 200 people who participated."

"Our most popular divisions are the 12-under groups. The 13-15 group is also popular, but we get quite a few adults, which was by invitation only to the top six high school senior divers in the nation as determined by tapes sent in by each of the competitors. Baker was less than 50 points behind her, and was a point and a half behind Minnesota's Jennifer Cook for fifth place.

Field events in the adult division are:
— Shot put.
— Discus.
— Long jump.
— Triple jump.
— High jump.
— Pole vault.
Adult running events scheduled

this summer are:

— The 1,500- and 1,600-meter race walks.

— Three-kilometer and five-kilometer individual runs, as well as a 5K team run.

— The 100-, 200- and 400-meter dashes.

— The 800-, 1,500-, 1,600-, 3,000- and 3,200-meter runs.

"The cross country runs were something we added last year," Eschman said. "We'll have the 3K and 5K individual runs on the first and third weeks and the 5K team run on the fifth week."

"It's something we set up hoping to get high school teams involved."

Package entry fees — good for all five meets — are $10 for the youth division, $15 for adults and $30 for families. The weekly meet fee is $4 per person.

"We get people from all over the area," Eschman said. "A lot has to do with the weather. If it's not real hot, we get good participation."

"The biggest problem is finding volunteers to help me run the meets. Luckily, a lot of parents and coaches help out." Entry forms are available at the Collinsville Sports Store and the Collinsville Herald. Forms are also available at the track on meet nights.

Alton cuts songbird habitat

The sweet song of the scarlet tanager is disappearing from along the River Road in Alton. Construction has destroyed the nesting trees of songbirds in Alton to Grafton in the last 25 years.

"Many of the birds are vanishing, and that's a tragedy," said Gene Sands of Fosterburg, a bird-watcher and member of the Illinois Audubon Society.

More than 60 varieties of birds from South America every spring nest in a green belt that borders the River Road, said Taylor Delaney, a biologist at Principia College at Elmhurst. "Our observations show that many of the birds are getting more scarce every summer," said Delaney, who guides classes on bird-watching trips.

The wooded bluffs from Blue Pool near Alton to Paris Maquette State Park attract as many varieties of birds as any place in the country, he said.

"It's a paradise for beautiful birds," said Robert Freeman of Godfrey, a Sierra Club member.

Contractors have destroyed habitat of the birds in clearing land for new homes, business places, recreation sites and parking lots.

"We're whittling away at one of the country's most beautiful bird sanctuaries," he said.

More than 150 varieties of birds migrate from South America through the River Bend every spring, Sands said, and "as many as 50 to 60 (varieties of) songbirds stop and nest for the summer. They're spectacular in color and song."

In the spring, Delaney keeps his eyes peeled in the woods above Elmhurst for the bright red scarlet tanager and ruby-throated hummingbird.

"We're not seeing the scarlet tanager, the blue and warblers as much, and it worries me," Delaney rattles off the names of some birds that live in the woods around Blue Pool, Elmhurst.

And Grafton. "There are yellow-throated warblers, orioles, woodpeckers, bluebirds and goldfinches."

In May, Delaney listens for the first flute-like note of the bright orange meadow lark. "It's a clear, beautiful melody that echoes across the tree tops," he said.

The oriole spends the winter in the trees in tropical South America, Delaney said. Then, every spring, it flies thousands of miles to the woods beyond the bluffs near Elmhurst.

The orioles make pit stops in Cuba and the Gulf Coast and land near Grafton around April 21, Delaney said. "It's a mystery how they arrive here near the same day every year."

Freeman has watched scarlet tanagers nest in woods near his home in Clifton Terrace every year. He said, "I haven't seen the tanager this spring, and I'm concerned."

Native starts 4th industrial firm

A native Granite City has started his fourth production company.

Aided by his manufacturing experience and an ability to invent new processes and equipment, George Sturmon is credited with spearheading the formation and growth of a variety of enterprises.

He is being praised for developing and manufacturing products to increase efficiency and productivity, meeting the immediate and future needs of many other heavy-duty industrial firms.

After founding Aro Engineered Systems, American Brake Bonding and American Torque Rod of Ohio, Sturmon has just developed a newly patented cleaner/filter for diesel engine cooling systems.

Utilizing a spin feature for easy maintenance and a dry pelletized form of proven cleaning chemicals, the Enviro-Cool filter is considered unique.

The cleaner/filter and inhibitor/filter package will clean and maintain a diesel engine cooling system without the routine draining of coolant fluids.

This decreases engine downtime by cleaning and protecting an engine as it runs.

Because use of the filter does not require draining of antifreeze, which has been ruled by the Environmental Protection Agency as a hazardous waste, it is said to provide an environmentally responsible method of cleaning and protecting diesel engine cooling systems.

Sturmon and a group of St. Charles investors have started Enviro-Cool Inc. to produce and market the cleaner/filter and corresponding inhibitor/filter.

As are all his other companies, Enviro-Cool is committed to "developing and providing technically advanced products for worldwide heavy-duty industries."

A spokesman said, "To the local economy, it will mean the creation of new jobs to support the expanded activity as new products are developed."

and marketed.

"As in the earlier years of American business life, when small businesses provided stability and constant support to the community, Enviro-Cool seeks to service a national and worldwide market while remaining dedicated to local economic growth and stability."

A 1964 graduate of Granite City High School, Sturmon is a professional engineer licensed in Missouri and Illinois.

He was selected and has appeared in the "Who's Who of American Inventors" since 1990. His mother, Nora Sturmon, still resides in Granite City.

Waiters, waitresses not only ones counting on that tip

By Roger McGrath
Correspondent

Jennifer Butterbaugh sits on the horns of a dilemma.

As owner of a hair-styling salon, she knows that tipping — a gratuity that signals the customer was pleased with the service rendered by the stylist — is an accepted standard of modern life. But should every person providing a service be tipped? "I'm not sure if I'm supposed to tip my dog groomer or not," says Butterbaugh, owner of Ginger Bay Salon Group, Des Peres.

Restaurant Ramon Gallardo, a frequent traveler, is similarly perplexed. Upon arrival at a hotel, he finds that one bellman unloads the luggage and curbs it inside, where, after checking in, another bellman delivers it to the room.

"How many times are you supposed to tip?" Gallardo asks.

How much is an appropriate tip for a waiter? For the porter at the airport who tags your bags?

Theories on tipping's evolution abound, but however it got started, tipping today is an accepted and often expected practice. Indeed, restaurants often pay waiters and waitresses less than the minimum wage — often as little as $2 an hour — on the assumption that tips will boost the server's income well beyond the minimum.

There's also a cost consideration. "We would have to literally double our prices" if servers were paid minimum wage, Gallardo says.

A tip conveys a message. "It says, 'Thank you for the extra service,'" says Stephanie Turner, of Brentwood Travel, Chesterfield.

Conversely, giving a waiter less than the typical 15 percent to 18 percent tip is a signal you didn't like the level of service, explains Vince Bommarito Jr. of Tony's Restaurant downtown.

Turner offers these tips on the etiquette of tipping: Tips needn't be extravagant. "If you ask somebody to do something out of the line of their normal duties," you ought to tip them. And, remember, "you don't have to tip."

Barrett, waitresses and bartenders are the best-known of those riding the tipping bus. Others include barbers and hair stylists, although many stylists aren't insulted when customers fail to tip them, Butterbaugh says. The typical tip: 15 percent. Taxi drivers get less, usually 10 percent of the fare.

Travel agent Stephanie Turner figures the convenience of having bellmen or airport porters lug your luggage for you is worth $1 per bag. Ramon Gallardo resolves the "how many times do you tip?" question by tipping just once because hotel personnel usually pool tips.

Keller, the bartending trainer, tips hotel maids $1 a day.

"Little things are done for me," she promptly gets an extra towel or extra coffee.

Miller, though, is pickier. He always uses two pillows when he sleeps.

"The next night, if there are two pillows where I sleep, I leave a tip," he says. On cruise ships, the cabin steward and waiter should each be tipped $9 per person per day, Turner says.

Financial decisions and early retirement plans

(Advice by Christos G. Dousmanis, first vice president-investments, Faine Webber Inc.)

You've just made the decision to accept your company's offer of early retirement.

Next comes another important decision: what will you do with your retirement pension benefits?

Why is this so important? How you choose to receive your payouts will determine your financial security during retirement and your survivor's security as well.

Since accrued retirement benefits are one of the largest assets most people will ever see, it's important to give this decision considerable thought.

One option for your pension benefits is to take a company-offered annuity.

An annuity is a constant stream of income for a certain period of time, often a single or joint lifetime.

You can choose a single-life annuity, which pays a monthly sum for as long as you live but doesn't provide for your survivors after your death.

Or, you can choose a joint-and-survivor annuity that pays out less per month, but continues to pay a beneficiary from half to all of your monthly allotment for life, in the event of your death.

For example, a joint-and-survivor annuity might pay you $300 per month for as long as you live. Upon your death, if your spouse survives you, your spouse might receive $150 a month for life. This is known as a 50 percent survivor benefit.

The annuity's chief advantage is a guaranteed payment, and some plans provide for cost-of-living increases, thereby providing an inflation hedge.

Also, if you beat the actuarial estimates for your life expectancy, you could cash out ahead. What the annuity does not give you is special tax treatment choices, investment control, income flexibility or assets for your heirs.

Another option is to receive your retirement benefits immediately in a single payment called a lump-sum distribution.

This option gives you more flexibility in your investment decisions, with the potential to earn a higher return.

The lump-sum distribution does not, however, guarantee payments, although certain investments you may make once you receive your distribution can guarantee payments (i.e., annuity contracts).

If you invest your lump sum unwisely, the money could run out during your lifetime. In this way, the lump-sum distribution imposes more responsibility on the recipient to invest wisely.

If you have the option and select a lump-sum distribution, you may think you've made your big decision. But you still have to decide how to invest the money and whether to pay taxes now or defer them by rolling a lump-sum distribution into an IRA Rollover Account.

If you decide to pay the tax right away, you may be eligible for special tax treatments.

If you receive your distribution as a lump sum and don't roll it into an IRA, you may be subject to serious tax liabilities and early withdrawal penalties — if you are younger than age 59 1/2.

The advantage of deferring taxes is that you wind up with more money to invest because the tax bite doesn't hit your distribution right away.

However, a disadvantage of this strategy is that, if you find that you don't need the money before you're 59 1/2, you may face a 10 percent IRS penalty for early withdrawals from these programs.

If you choose the IRA Rollover, the options for investment in self-directed IRAs are almost limitless: from stocks, bonds, mutual funds, unit trusts and limited partnerships, to government securities, CDs and money market funds and even U.S. gold and silver coins.

There is something for every type of investor, from conservative to speculative.

Deciding what to do with your retirement plan distribution can be very confusing, but there is professional help available.

Several stylists from the Lady's Clipper Beauty Salon attended an in-salon class on a new product from Matrix called Color Graphics.

The class was taught by Matrix consultant Judy Hendricks of St. Louis. She travels around the country, training stylists and also attending classes to further her own education.

She said, "Color Graphics is a new technique of highlighting the hair. It is not more natural looking but will not turn brassy and actually conditions the hair in the process."

The stylists learned several techniques of applying the color for the different looks that are popular now. The class was held at the Lady's Clipper, 2125 Pontoon Road, in Granite City.

Attending were salon owner Phyllis Shaver and stylists Dee Cionko, Sharon Meyer, Tammy Harmon and Margaret Scott. Stylist assistant Penny Hubbard was a model.

Carla Buzan of Granite City, a registered physical therapist, has been named director of physical therapy at Anderson Hospital, Maryville, according to William Hurteau, hospital administrator.

Buzan began her career in physical therapy at St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Granite City in 1984. In 1986, she transferred to West facility's Wellness Center to perform outpatient physical therapy services.

In her new position, Buzan will be responsible for developing Anderson's physical therapy department.

"Carla's background in an orthopedic setting and her experience with outpatient services will make her a real asset to the hospital," Hurteau said. She began her duties May 11.

Buzan holds a bachelor's degree in biology from Millikin University in Decatur. She also received a certificate in physical therapy from the Mayo School of Health-Related Sciences in Rochester, Minn.

Local insurance agent earns professional honor

William T. Frazier, a Granite City agent for the State Farm Insurance Companies, has been granted the LUTCF (Life Underwriter Training Council) Fellow professional designation.

It is conferred on life underwriters who meet the exacting training, membership and ethical standards jointly set by the Life Underwriter Training Council and the National Association of Life Underwriters (NALU).

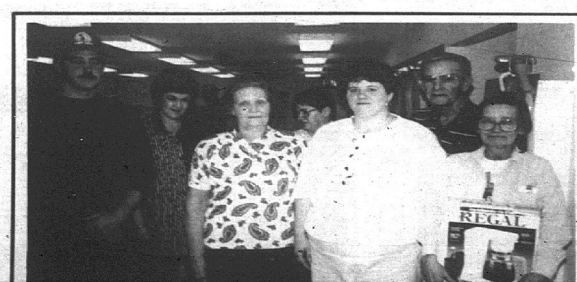

The designation marks an agent's long-term commitment to professionalism on behalf of clients, establishes the agent's competence and business experience, marks a commitment to NALU's Code of Ethics, and frequently leads to additional professional development.

Frazier will be honored at a national ceremony Sept. 23 in Atlanta during the 1992 annual convention of NALU. A local recognition event also will be conducted in Alton, where he will be presented with the official diploma.

Since the introduction of the LUTCF designation in 1984, more than 32,000 individuals have qualified.

Frazier is a member of the Lewis and Clark Life Underwriters Association and has been active in the profession for 31 years.

Frazier is to be installed as president of the Lewis and Clark Association for 1992-93 at the June meeting.
